Irwin's Dream Girl

By NETTIE PLATT

Copyright, 1905, by K. A. Whitehead

All through the delirium Jack Irwin was haunted by the vision of one face. So real did it seem that when at last the crisis came and he emerged, weak and tired, from the dream world in which he had lived for days he instinctively looked about for the reality.

Instead there were only his mother, drawn a little out of her natural repression by her joy at his recovery; the doctor and a grim faced nurse.

"Where's the other one?" he demanded as he looked about.

"What other one?" laughed the doctor.

"That girl with the blue eyes," he asked impatiently. "Can't you remember?"

Mrs. Irwin came forward and laid a hand upon his forehead. "My dear boy," she explained, "you must remember that you have been in a delirium for a long time. It must be one of the dream fancies to which you allude."

"I wish I could get back to where she is," he sighed, and then he dropped off to sleep again.

When he opened his eyes again there was only the nurse, and she would not let him talk of his delusions, yet somehow he could not bring himself to believe that this was a part of his dream. He could recall in a hazy way many of the phantasies through which he had passed, but it was not the same with the girl. There had been something real, something tangible, about her. He could remember that all through those disordered hours he could see her face smiling at him and beckoning him on to safety when the others sought to lure him into danger. He could not believe, even now, that it was but a figment of a fever fired brain.

And yet convalescence passed, and he took up his work again. The blue eyed girl remained only a dream, something very real to him and yet none the less a dream. It puzzled him, but he could not talk of it to others.

He was thinking of her one afternoon when his superintendent came in and reported that Cassidy, the engineer, had been badly hurt by being caught in the machinery.

Irwin, always thoughtful of his men, gave orders that he should have the best of care, and that evening, on his way home, he stopped in himself to see how the injured man was getting along.

"Nicely, Mr. Irwin," said the grateful man. "The doctor did all he could to make me easy, and I have a nurse that's an angel from heaven."

"Didn't know they had gone into the nursing business," laughed Irwin.

"Wait until you see her," warned the engineer. "She'll be up in a minute; she's gone after some broth."

There was the soft sound of a door opening and Irwin rose to greet the nurse. As he did so he grasped the chair for support. It was his dream girl, the girl who every one had sought to convince him was a myth.

She came forward with a little bow, and Cassidy, with a wave of his hand, introduced her.

"I think I must have seen you somewhere before," suggested Irwin tentatively.

"No," she said evenly, "I think not."

"I'm certain that I have," he persisted. But she would not continue the discussion, and search his memory as he would he could not remember Edna Clintock.

That first visit was but one of many, and he soon discovered the hour at which the nurse took her daily walk and was generally ready to leave about the time she emerged from the house.

He was never obtrusive, but in a quiet, masterful way he suited his steps to hers and continued to walk with her.

Several weeks had passed and Cassidy was almost ready to return to work when Irwin spoke at last. They had told him that she was leaving in the morning, and though she had purposely delayed her walk until long after she supposed Irwin had gone his tall figure loomed up before her at the gate. Falling into step he slipped her arm through his.

"I thought you had gone long ago," she faltered.

"Did you suppose that I would let you slip out of my life again?" he asked.

"Again?" she echoed curiously.

Briefly he recounted his strange experience. "You have been in my thoughts, sleeping and waking, ever since," he concluded. "You are the only woman I can ever love, and I want you for my wife."

"I must not," she cried, frightened. "I have promised!" She caught herself, but the mischief was done. Bit by bit he drew the story from her.

She had been called to attend him when the fever had stricken him. Mrs. Irwin had warned her against flirtation, being fearful that her son would marry. She had promised to be careful, but in his delirium Jack had seemed to know that she was there, and one evening, to quiet him, she had brushed his fever burned lips with her own just as Mrs. Irwin had entered the room.

His mother would not believe that the kiss had been given merely as a part of the nursing. She had been dismissed on her promise that she would say nothing, and the rest of the household had been warned to insist that the angular woman he had found by his bedside when he awakened had nursed him throughout his illness.

"Now, you see," she faltered, "I am in duty bound not to marry you."

"Do you love me, sweetheart?" he urged. Her eyes answered long before she summoned the courage for the whispered "Yes."

"Then leave the rest to me!" he cried joyfully, and that the rest was satisfactory is proved by the cards.

Wines of the Ancients.

"The tombs of Beni Hassam," said an antiquary of Chicago, "are interesting on account of their realistic paintings. In these tombs, which are 5,000 years old, there are many pictures of drunkards. Drunken men, waving wine cups in both hands, are being carried home by sneering slaves. Drunken women lurch through the streets, followed by little mocking children. All this, mind you, 5,000 years ago.

"Alexander the Great used to hold drinking contests. He who could drink and carry off the most wine won. Promachus, the skilled Promachus, won a gold cup from Alexander by drinking fourteen quarts of wine. Fourteen quarts!

"The Romans used to serve at their banquets wines eighty and a hundred years old. They would mix with these wines turpentine, resin and sea water. Thus, they thought, a fine flavor was got.

"I once tasted a wine 200 years old. It was so thick we had to dig it out with a spoon. Its flavor was so horrible that turpentine, resin and sea water would no doubt have improved it."—Chicago Chronicle.

A Pious Face Wash.

Here is an enchanting recipe copied from a book on the toilet published in 1834—in Boston, of course:

"A Wash to Give the Face a Younger Look.—Take sulphur, one and one-half ounces; G. oliban and myrrh, two ounces; amber, six drams; rose water, one and one-half pints. Distill the whole in balneum mariae, wash yourself with some at bedtime, and in the morning with barley water, and with the blessing of God it will not fail to give you a younger look."

Where will you find such mingled piety and shrewdness in modern beauty papers? Think how the ladies who advertise some wonder working cream or powder could spare their consciences at the last great day if they would only insert such clauses in the recipes they give. And do not the ingredients sound delightful? Amber, which suggests Cleopatra and her pearl (by the way, what a cosmetic that should make), and G. oliban, whatever it may be—it sounds like the name of a Christian.—Exchange.

For a Young Man With Money.

If I were a young man with a certain amount of capital and desirous to increase it at the expense of fools, I should become a dealer in pictures and in works of art. The prices paid at auctions for such articles by a few dealers bidding against each other are abused, although a vast number of very wealthy fools who purchase them from dealers are ready to pay still higher. The mere fact that some article has been sold in an auction room at a high price attracts them, and they buy it from the dealer at a higher one in order to be able to point to it in their houses and to tell their friends how much it cost them. The dealer consequently makes much money by acting as a middleman. Whether there is any arrangement to run up the price among dealers I do not know, but I have always wondered whether this is the case and whether the original owner always gets the selling price at the auction.—London Truth.

Old Roman Ways.

A rich Roman who married was regarded as a fool. Unmarried and without heirs, he was courted by crowds of sycophants and legacy hunters, who swarmed around him, on the lookout for gifts during his life or for legacies at his death. He was an object of attention to and adulation from all. Each Roman vied with his neighbors in his display of wealth. Ostentation became a passion. A feast was not considered a success unless the cost of it was a matter for discussion by "all Rome." Palaces and villas were built in the most splendid and costly style. Beautiful marbles, gold and silver and precious stones were lavishly used in order to show the wealth of the owner. Nero had several rooms in his golden house studded all over with pearls. Goethe might well term the Romans the greatest parvenus in history.

Corks For Bottle Stoppers.

The application of cork as a bottle stopper for liquid vessels is said to be of great antiquity. The earliest record extant of its use in Europe is that mentioned by Horace, who asserts that the Romans had cork as stoppers for their wine amphorae. Certain of the uses of cork were known to the ancient Greeks and Egyptians, but whether they used cork for stopping the mouths of their liquid vessels history does not say. It was not, however, until the year 1760 that the Spaniards first commenced to work their cork woods with some degree of regularity for the making of corks. Although perhaps corks were more or less in use from the time glass bottles were first invented, which Beckmann asserts to have been in the fifteenth century, yet it was not until two and a half centuries later that the Spaniards began to prepare cork for bottle stoppers, which they did in a forest situated at the northeast of the Tigueras, on the Muge. The cork industry has since gradually risen to be one of the first magnitude, its chief center in Spain being in Catalonia.

What the Teacher Must Do.

Knowledge is good, but wisdom is better. The college valedictorian, trained to take knowledge in rather than to impart it, may have much of it with but little wisdom. He may be able, as a teacher, to drill boys and girls in Greek and Latin declensions and cram them with facts, useful or valueless, but if he cannot produce in them what Spencer calls "pleasurable excitement" and interest he is a failure. His would be the sort of teaching that harps upon obedience and discipline and endeavors by force of rule and rod to oblige the pupil to study and learn. The will cannot be forced, but the real teacher knows well that it can be led. He remembers the remark of Rousseau that "the teacher's province is less to instruct than to guide;" that "he must not lay down precepts, but teach his pupils to discover them." This was the way of that great teacher, Agassiz, certainly.—Arthur Gilman in Atlantic.

The Small Mouthed Bass.

The small mouthed bass fully deserves his reputation for being vigorous and gamy from infancy. He is extremely pugnacious by nature and has fighting tactics peculiarly his own which for strength, activity and craft are unequaled. I once took a bass four inches long on a spoon hook, the bowl of which was more than two inches long. This bass does not hesitate to tackle that terror of all other fish—the fierce and voracious pickerel. With his first dorsal fin rigidly set up, he lays off some ten or twenty feet and then makes a rapid dash right into and under the "long face," forcing him to clear out at once or ripping him so badly that he is hors de combat. The fact has been established that bass introduced into a pond containing pickerel will ultimately destroy the latter. The same fate awaits other fish, including trout.—Outing.

Wind Superstitions.

The Finns of Norway long entertained a traditional belief in the power of controlling the winds by a small rope with three knots tied in it. This popular superstition gave rise to the curious industry of making and selling these wind controlling ropes with magical knots to mariners and fishermen. It was believed that by unloosing the first knot a favorable breeze was secured, the second raised a strong gale and if the third knot was untied it would prove the prelude to a tempest. According to Ranulph Higden, the witches of the Isle of Man had a similar ancient practice of selling winds to sailors.

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN.

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over forty years' experience—a skilful and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many sensitively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless, and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment cures in the privacy of your home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands of bad cases. It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take his advice and be well.

Mrs. R. D. Monfort, of Lebanon, Warren Co., O., writes: "I have received the 'Medical Adviser.' A crisp, new five dollar bill could not tempt me to part with it."

On receipt of 21 one-cent stamps, to pay cost of mailing only, we will send to any address a paper-bound copy of Dr. Pierce's great 1000-page book, "The Common Sense Medical Adviser," Or, for 31 stamps the same in cloth binding. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Pierce's Pleasant Pellets The Original LITTLE LIVER PILLS, first put up by old Dr. R. V. Pierce over 40 years ago. Much imitated, but never equaled. Little pill, Little dose, but give great results in a curative way in all derangements of Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Good-Fellowship a Misapplied Term

It is a wise move that reformers are making now against the evils of so-called good-fellowship, for while moral and spiritual directors have been giving their attention to what they thought to be greater evils, good-fellowship has been parading as a most desirable attainment, and young men have adopted it as a standard and false ideal. Good-fellowship has made great inroads in the past few years, for the vices that follow in its train were covered over and protected by the term good-fellowship, which really means good comradeship—the love of fellowmen and mutual happiness and interests. Like the vicious show which is run under a misleading name and appears all right before you enter it, good-fellowship was passed unheeded by those who sought to correct corruption and uncover vice. Meanwhile young men were led to believe that in order to be up to the popular standard, they must be good-fellows, and once having become candidates, they soon become acquainted with good-fellowship in all its phases. From the confessions of good-fellows, it appears that it is a dangerous business—leading to crime and downfall. Good-fellowship does not mean what it should. The corruption of the term is to be deplored, but it now implies licensed vice, the sanction of its devotees being given to drink, carousing, gambling, excess and prodigality. It is almost a craze with those who enter into the whirl, and for the hollow title, "good-fellow," men will sacrifice home, wife, children, position, business repute, and make of themselves unreclaimable outcasts. If this so-called good-fellowship is a soil which produces such rank growth, it is high time that it be condemned, or the seeds of evil will continue to be sown therein and the yield will be bitter fruit. Men must be reminded that this good-fellowship is no criterion. It has always existed, but never been tolerated. To-day it is a menace because it has secretly honeycombed society in this country.

There is a higher and better fellowship, which has always been and ever will be the standard for all men. Is is no more or less than brotherly love, open heartedness, and the upholding of right. Its creed teaches its followers to be harmonious and fair at all times, to make others happy, to be kind, to keep faith. Those who abide by this creed are the only true good-fellows. Others are brazen imitators who desecrate the name.

The Future Fore-told

Oh! just keep your eyes open,
And you will perceive,
That Sonoma will be
What it's hard to conceive.
Two electric car stations,
In two thousand and six,
Upon our street corners
The Interurban will fix.
O'er our new city hall
We will feel justly great,
And all our old buildings
Will be out of date.
One-story structures
Will be of the past,
And sky-scrapers, tall,
Will be going up fast.
Each house will be sewered,
In proper good style,
And arc lights will shine
O'er the city a mile.
But if these things we'd see,
We must not go to sleep,
But vote for good government
As we sow we will reap.
Voting the bonds
For court house and lawn,
Was a proper departure;
Let the good work go on.
Now, Sonoma will be
A few years from this date,
A second Chicago,
Just as certain as fate.

Disastrous Rate-Making

It goes with the saying that the agency that fixes the railroad rates in the United States determines how the trade of the country shall be transacted. The Interstate Commerce Commissioners, once being given authority to make rates, will have powers of great scope, beyond those of any other equal number of politically selected men in the United States. They can regulate the trade in one commodity in one section—they can exercise their authority in the matter of all commodities and all sections.

The Interstate Commerce commission may regulate the trade in iron manufactures from Alabama to Texas, from Pittsburg to Texas, from Maryland to Texas, from Buffalo to Texas, from Duluth to Texas, from Pueblo, Colo., to Texas. The Interstate Commerce Commission may determine how much of the product of the cotton-milling industry of New England shall be sold in Texas, and how much of the cotton-milling industries of the Carolinas may be sold in Texas. The Interstate Commerce Commission may determine whether the people of Texas shall buy their shoes in St. Louis, in Cincinatti, in Chicago or in New England. The Commission may determine to what extent the products of the Pacific Coast shall be marketed in the Eastern States and hold the destiny of the great green deciduous fruit and citrus fruit industries of California entirely within their keeping.

There is no trade in this country sufficient in volume to be worth fighting for that the Interstate Commerce Commission may not regulate, and there is no man in this country who is a manufacturer, who does anything more than a local business, who may not wake up to find that the Interstate Commerce Commission has reached a decision that deprives him of a substantial part of his market. These considerations being understood by business men, tend to the opinion that sectional disasters and sectional conflicts would follow rate-making by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The opposition to the proposition to make rate makers of the Interstate Commerce Commission is based on sound business principles.—Ex.

The Board of Trade of Berkeley is being resurrected after many months of inactivity, and the resurrection is going to be accomplished through the miracle of a banquet. We might be enabled to get the Sonoma Board of trade members out by the same method. Ordinary meetings will not tempt them, but dainty morsels might. Who will inaugurate the experiment?

Accepts Important Journalistic Position

Mr. Edward B. Payne of Glen Ellen has accepted an important editorial position in San Francisco on "Gleason's," the new weekly which is to be launched on the journalistic sea to-day.

Mr. Payne is a man who knows men and affairs, and is a writer of talent and experience. "Gleason's" destiny is assured with such men on its staff. Mr. Eames, formerly of the "Overland Monthly," has also been selected for an important position with the new publication, and all the departments are in the hands of such competent writers that the appearance of the paper has been awaited with great interest.

Rheumatism
Is one of the constitutional diseases. It manifests itself in local aches and pains,—inflamed joints and stiff muscles,—but it cannot be cured by local applications. It requires constitutional treatment acting through the blood, and the best is a course of the great medicine which has permanently cured thousands of cases.
Hood's Sarsaparilla
For testimonials of remarkable cures send for Book on Rheumatism, No. 7.

EXCITING DAY IN BATCHELOR CASE

Another Sensational Affidavit Filed—Defendant Gets $50—Custody of Children Decided

Monday was an exciting day in the Batchelor case at Santa Rosa, when the hearing came up on the motion for alimony and in regard to the custody of the children. Another sensational affidavit was filed by the plaintiff, reiterating his former serious allegations against his wife, and calling her a moral pervert of the worst stamp.

Mrs. Batchelor was called to the witness stand when the question of alimony came up and testified that she was without means and an employee at the City Hotel in this place.

After questioning Mr. Batchelor and having him explain why he was worth only $5,000 now, when he alleged he was worth $10,000 in June. Judge Burnett ordered him to pay his wife $50 at once, and further hearing of the matter went over until next Monday.

As regards the custody of the children it developed that the two elder children have been under the care of the sisters at St. Joseph's Academy, Rio Vista, where they were taken by their fatner. The court ordered that the two children should remain under the father's control, and that the mother be permitted to see them at any time she desired. The youngest child was allowed to remain with the defendant.

In seeking to ascertain who was the proper person to have the children, Batchelor was put on the stand and testified under oath that there came near being a tragedy at the ranch on one occasion, when he came up to investigate rumors concerning his wife's conduct and saw M. Cummings drive up and go into the house with the defendant. He said:

"I sat down on the ground near the house, thinking what course I should pursue. My first impulse was to get my shotgun and kill them both. I sat there for half an hour, and when I thought of killing them, something seemed to say to me, 'Remember the children.' So after all I got up and left the ranch and went back to San Francisco, leaving Cummings and my wife still in the house."

Judge Burnett asked Batchelor if he was not unduly suspicious and jealous of his wife, but he said he was not.

Mrs. Batchelor has not told her story as yet, other than to enter absolute denial to Batchelor's allegations, but her side is awaited with great interest.

GUN EXPLODES INJURING MAN

Daniell Vigoroux, a Summer Visitor, Meets With Accident, which Costs Him Partial Loss of Hand

Daniell Vigoroux of San Francisco, who has been spending his vacation at Lawrence Villa, met with a serious accident this week while out hunting, and as a result has partially lost his right hand. Vigoroux started out with a shotgun of old pattern, and was taking a shot at some birds, when the barrel of the gun exploded, tearing away all the fleshy part of his hand and blowing off his thumb completely. The explosion attracted the attention of passers by, who came to the rescue of the injured man. His thumb was discovered in a nearby tree, where the force of the explosion had carried it. He was hurriedly taken to Dr. Thomson, who found the injury to be a very serious one. Part of the hand had to be cut away to save the rest, and some of the bones removed.

Vigoroux will go through life with no thumb and about half a hand, but he is fortunate in not having to have the entire member amputated.

Fayette Mitcheltree Knows About Boodlers

Fayette Mitcheltree, formerly of this place, but now of Palo Alto, has come into conspicuous prominence through his connection with the Ralston anti prize-fight bill, and his recent declaration that he knows that certain legislators were bribed.

Although he led the opposition to the anti prize-fight bill, and declares that he loves the manly art of self-defense, he says he had no finger in the pie, although he knew that five of the legislators, who were doing less work than he was against the bill, were getting bribe money. His expose has been prompted by the fact that he has been slandered, and wishes to clear himself of ugly accusations hinted at by his enemies.

Mitcheltree's Sonoma friends are surprised to hear of his love for prize-fighting and connections with the sporting fraternity, as while here he gave evidence of no such inclinations, and was a regular attendant at one of our churches.

SERVING A SUMMONS

[Original.]

Bernice Church was born in the army, brought up in the army and should have married in the army. Indeed, when she was eighteen she was engaged to Edgar Adams, a recent graduate from the United States Military academy. But her father was very much opposed to the match. Adams was beloved by every one, but he was a good deal of a scapegrace. Franklin Swift, the son of a wealthy man, having manifested a desire to marry Bernice, Colonel Church persuaded her to break with Adams and accept Swift.

When Adams received notice of the fact he simply remarked: "That makes me a bachelor for life. Let's have a bottle of wine." The only change noticed in his demeanor was that he fought harder than before.

Ten years passed. Adams, now a captain, secured a year's leave of absence for the purpose of studying cavalry improvements abroad, and on his way called upon his old flame. He found her in great trouble. Her husband was in a mire of debt, one of her children was very ill, she was herself in bad health, and, to cap the climax, her husband's father was at the point of death. The condition of affairs required that the husband get away in order to escape service for awhile from his creditors. Upon the death of his father he would inherit a fortune that would enable him to extricate himself. But to leave under the circumstances was next to impossible. The result of all this was that Captain Adams, with the help of an ingenious lawyer, assumed the debt and went into hiding. The case could not go on without Adams being summoned.

For a month Adams, who was an expert at Indian stratagems, found it easy to elude the bailiffs. Then they became as foxy as he. Having tracked him to the country place of one of his friends they set their wits to work to get him where they could read the summons to him. One evening just before dark Adams heard a furious firing in the grounds, and, true to a soldier's instincts, rushed out with a revolver; but, seeing a man coming for him with a paper in his hands, the captain fired several bullets over his head, checked his career and retreated to the house.

Soon after this attempt to serve him Adams was standing one morning at a window when a company of the state militia marched down the road not far from the house. Their commander in trying to have them countermarch got them into confusion. Adams threw up the sash and called the proper directions. While he was shouting the orders a man emerged from behind a tree, at the same time fumbling in his side coat pocket. Adams caught sight of him just as he drew a paper and closed the sash.

This escape made him more cautious for a time, but confinement was irksome to him, and he made an occasional sally in disguise. One evening at a restaurant a man at a neighboring table made offensive remarks to him, and Adams, going over to where he sat, slapped his face. The man did not at the time seem disposed to follow up the affair, but the next day Adams received a challenge from one Tucker.

Adams naturally inferred that the man was the one he had had the quarrel with, but wondered how the fellow knew who he was. However, he was too much of a fighter to avoid any encounter and accepted promptly. He at once sent for a brother officer, and the affair was arranged to come off at dawn in order to avoid the bailiffs.

Before leaving the house the grounds were searched, and the coast being clear the party drove away in a closed carriage. Finding the others already at the appointed place, the ground was paced off and the principals placed in position. Suddenly from behind neighboring trees a number of men stepped forth and surrounded the combatants. Then Mr. Tucker, throwing down his weapon, pulled a summons. Adams, disgusted at the turn the affair had taken, raised his pistol, aimed at the paper and put a hole through it, at the same time sending it floating on the morning breeze. He then knocked down three of the men surrounding him, but the paper was recovered and read to him before he could get away.

The doughty captain returned to the house he had been hiding in, much disgruntled at having been the victim of so well laid a trick. The truth is the man who had insulted him in the restaurant was one of the detectives watching for him, suspected his identity and had insulted him purposely. The captain had been shadowed on his way home and the challenge sent to trap him, but on his return he found a telegram that Mr. Swift, senior, was dead and there was no further necessity for his hiding.

Thus it was that Captain Adams saved the fortune of the man who had taken the girl he loved from him, and by doing so kept the family from ruin. As soon as his services could be dispensed with he proceeded on his trip, followed by the blessings of those he had served. On his return he hunted up the man who had fired a summons at him instead of a bullet and induced him to enter the secret service department of the army.

Ten years lated Adams, then a colonel, returned to visit the Swifts. He found both father and mother dead, but in their oldest daughter he saw the counterpart of his old love. His exploits with the detectives had caught her fancy when a girl of ten and she was ready to fall in love with the middle aged colonel. And so the fortune he had saved for his rival he found useful to his own wife.

Excursions to the East at Half Fare

During the coming summer months rare opportunity will be given to visit eastern cities at a minimum expense.

Tickets will be sold by the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad at practically half the regular rates, or one fare for the round trip from California points to Denver, Omaha, Kansas City, Memphis, St. Louis, Chicago and many other points. For a slight extra cost trip may be made via Portland with a free stop-over at the Lewis and Clarke Fair.

The world-famed scenery of the Denver & Rio Grande needs no introduction to most travelers. The Canon of the Grande, the Eagle River Canon, the Canon of the Arkansas, the Black Canon of the Gunnison, the Royal Gorge, and Pike's Peak, form but a part of that glorious panorama, all of which is viewed by daylight from the new observation cars with open tops—as one passenger said, "It is just like touring in an auto."

Through sleeping cars to all principal points east.

Mr. W. J. Shotwell, General Agt., D. & R. G. R. R. Co., 625 Market street, San Francisco, will, on application, quote lowest fares, arrange sleeping car accomodations and all details of your trip, and send you free some beautifully illustrated travel books. Write today.

A Judicious Inquiry.

A well known traveling man who visits the drug trade says he has often heard druggists inquire of customers who asked for a cough medicine, whether it was wanted for a child or for an aduit, and if for a child they almost invariably recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The reason for this is that they know that there is no danger from it and that it always cures. There is not the least danger in giving it, and for coughs, colds and croup it is unsurpassed. For sale by Shoults & Co.

Apt.

Douglas Jerrold had a way of putting pat names to things. One of his remarks is given by George Hodder in "Manners of My Time." Jerrold was at a party one night where a doctor, who was tall and thin almost to emaciation, had for a partner a lady who was short and square in build. Turning to a bystander, he remarked, "There is a mile dancing with a mile stone."

When Labor Did Not Tell.

A home missionary who visited Sing Sing prison took occasion to have a heart to heart talk with one of the convicts.

"Don't you know, my friend," said he, "that crime never brings success? It is only achieved by hard labor."

"I did six months of it at a stretch once, and I didn't come out no richer than I went in."

He Was Spurned.

"Believe me," said old Gotrox, "although I'm an old bachelor I'm sure I could learn to be a good husband. You know, a man is never too old to learn."

"Nor too old to yearn, perhaps," replied Miss Pechis; "also I'm sorry to say you're not too old to spurn."—Philadelphia Press.

Some Seasonable Advice.

It may be a piece of superfluous advice to urge people at this season of the year to lay in a supply af Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is almost sure to be needed before winter is over, and much more prompt and satisfactory results are obtained when taken as soon as a cold is contracted and before it has become settled in the system, which can only be done by keeping the remedy at hand. This remedy is so widely known and so altogether good that no one should hesitate about buying it in preference to any other. For sale by Shoults & Co.

Her Abilities.

"Do you believe there is anything in mind reading?"

"If there isn't, my wife's an awful good guesser. She never has to wait for me to do any confessing."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Kiss Feminine.

Brother—Which one of those Penton girls is it that you don't like? Sister—Sssh! Some one might hear you. When the crowd comes up I'll kiss her twice. —Illustrated Bits.

How to Cure Corns and Bunions.

First, soak the corn or bunion in warm water to soften it; then pare it down as closely as possible without drawing blood and apply Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice daily, rubbing vigorously for five minutes at each application. A corn plaster should be worn a few days to protect it from the shoe. As a general liniment for sprains, bruises, lameness and rheumatism, Pain Balm is unequaled. It is for sale by Shoults & Co.

A Vegetable Caterpillar.

In New Zealand and Australia they have an animal vegetable oddity which cannot be equaled by any other animate or inanimate object upon the earth's surface. It is the queerest of the many antipodean wonders and paradoxes and for the want of a better name has been called the "bulrush caterpillar" or "vegetable worm." The native Tasmanian name for the oddity is aweto-hotete. The aboveground portion of this vegetable worm is a fungus of the order sphaeria, which grows to a height of six or eight inches. When pulled up by the root this fungus is found to consist of a large caterpillar, showing head, segments and breathing holes—every detail of the grub being perfectly preserved. On examination the interior of the caterpillar is found to be composed of a "punky" looking substance, really the root of the fungus, which has cremated every fiber of what was once a living, breathing creature's anatomy. In all the instances which Buckland records, the sphaeria had made its attack in the fold of skin between the second and third segments of the caterpillar and had replaced all the animal substance of the creature's body with a hard brown vegetable growth resembling the fungoid growths on blackberry and other vines.

Saved His Life

J. W. Davenport, Wingo, Ky., writes June 14, 1902: "I want to tell you I believe Ballard's Snow Liniment saved my life. I was under the treatment of two doctors, and they told me one of my lungs was entirely gone, and the other badly affected. I also had a lump on my side. I don't think I could have lived over two months longer. I was induced by a friend to try Ballard's Snow Liniment. The first application gave me great relief; two fifty cent bottles cured me sound and well." It is a wonderful medicine and I recommend it to suffering humanity. Sold by L. S. Simmons.

Veils In Churches.

During the tenth century no woman was allowed to appear at church without a veil. It had to be a real veil, too, covering and concealing the features in order that the prayers and meditations of the men might not be disturbed by the contemplation of feminine loveliness. There was a tradition that the origin of the custom was in an order from a great French saint. When a young man he met a little girl with features so noble and beautiful that, although he was many years her senior, he immediately fell in love with her because she resembled a young lady to whom he had been engaged years before, but who died in his arms. The man and the child separated, and he became a priest. Many years later he saw her in the congregation just as he was entering the pulpit to preach, and the sight disturbed him to such an extent that his sermon was a failure, and he ordered all the women thenceforth to wear veils.

Cures Chills and Fever

G. W. Wirt, Nacogdoches, Texas, says: "His daughter has chills and fever for three years; he could not find anything that would help her till he used Herbine. His wife will not keep house without it, and cannot say too much for it." 50c. Sold by L. S. Simmons.

The Best Doctor

Rev. B. C. Horton, Sulphur Springs, Tex., writes July 19, 1902: "I have used in my family Ballard's Snow Liniment and Horehound Syrup, and they have proved certainly satisfactory. The liniment is the best we have ever used for headache and pains. The cough syrup has been our doctor for the last eight years." Sold by L. S. Simmons.

The Horse's Failing.

Hans, the ruralist, was in search of a horse.

"I've got the very thing you want," said Bill Lennox, the stableman—"a thoroughgoing road horse, five years old, sound as a quail, $175 cash down, and he goes ten miles without stopping."

Hans threw his hands skyward.

"Not for me," he said, "not for me. I wouldn't gif you 5 cents for him. I live eight miles out in der country, und I'd haf to walk back two miles."—Norman Voice.

Getting Specific.

Bifferly—When you and your wife were first married you used to call each other "birdie," didn't you? McSwat—Yes. Bifferly—Do you still do it? McSwat—Well, I call her a parrot and a magpie, and she usually refers to me as a jay.—Exchange.

Cures Winter Cough

J. E. Gover, 101 N. Main St., Ottawa, Kans., writes: "Every fall it has been my wife's trouble to catch a severe cold, and therefore to cough all winter long. Last fall I got her a bottle of Horehound Syrup She used it and has been able to sleep soundly all night long. Whenever the cough troubles her, two or three doses stop the cough, and she is able to be up and well." 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by L. S. Simmons.

The Self Possessed Bride.

One is in the habit nowadays of seeing brides absolutely self possessed, almost jocose, laughing and smiling and nodding to their friends. Mothers and sisters never cry nowadays at parting —Lady Violet Greville in Graphic.

Oddities.

Because a man cannot hear a dew drop is no sign that he is deaf, nor is it a sign of blindness because he never saw a horse fly, a board walk, a stone fence, a dog's pants, a rope walk or a clam bake.

Could Not Be Better.

The uniform success of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy has won for it a wide reputation and many people throughout the country will agree with Mr. Chas. W. Mattison, of Milford, Va., who says: "It works like magic, and is the best preparation I know of. It couldn't be any better." He had a serious attack of dysentery and was advised to try a bottle of this remedy, which he did, with the result that immediate relief was obtained. For sale by Shoults & Co.
